Idyl.

"Siendo yo niño tierno
Con la niña Dorilla," etc.
When we were but mere children—
My Dorilla and I—
We used to cull the brightest flowers
From every woodland high.
And her little fingers
Would make them seem more fair
Than ever, twined in chaplets
To garland either's hair.
So childhood's happy season
We passed in childish play,
Without a thought to count the hours
That floated fast away.
But are kept pace with pastime,
As year by year we grew,
And youth was conscious of a sense
That childhood never knew.
At meeting and at greeting
We laughed, and scarce knew why—
Some meaning, yet unspoken, seemed
The laugh to underlie.
'Twould make my heart beat faster
To bring her garlands now!
'Twould set her hands a-tremble
To bind them on my brow.
But once a pair of turtles
We saw, beside their nest,
That prettily with bill to bill
Their mutual flame expressed.
The sight was inspiration!
Lip pressed to lip revealed
The fire that long had smoldered
In either breast concealed.
Childhood—as fleets a shadow—
That moment passed away,
And Love with all his sunshine,
Lit up the happy day!
—DON JUAN MELUNDE VALDEZ.

Killed by a Billiard Cue.

About three o'clock Sunday afternoon a row occurred in Jacob Bremer's saloon, at No. 264 Milwaukee avenue, which resulted in a murder. Four young fellows, not one eighteen years old, named Anton Gunderson, Gilbert Arquette, Walter Dion, and Thomas Hawkins, entered the saloon about 2 o'clock, and after indulging in several drinks, the first two named started to play pool. A dispute arose as to the spotting of the ball; which resulted in Arquette seizing a billiard cue and striking Gunderson a vicious blow over the head with the heavy end of it, inflicting a deep gash about two inches long. The force of the blow knocked Gunderson senseless, but he was revived with water. The wound bled freely but the bar tender, James Stotzholdt, finally succeeded in staunching the flow of blood and bandaged the wound. The injured youth was taken in a fainting condition to his home, at No. 206 West Chicago avenue, but as he did not appear to be seriously injured, no physician was summoned. He was somewhat intoxicated, the blow on the head seemingly only partially sobering him, so that his complaints were attributed to his drinking rather than the wound. When about midnight his father and his sister visited him and found him sleeping, they thought he would be all right in the morning. About 5 o'clock the sister again visited him, and found that he was dead. His skull had been fractured by the deadly blow, and death resulted from congestion of the brain. The assault had previously been reported to the police, who regarded it as nothing but a trivial case of disorderly conduct, and paid no attention to it, not even deeming it worthy of a report, and throwing reporters off the trail by saying it was only an ordinary saloon row, and not worthy of notice. When informed of the fatal result of the "small row" they immediately set about arresting the participants, which ought to have been done some time before. Arquette was arrested at his home, No. 204 North Green street, and Hawkins, who it is claimed assaulted Gunderson, will be arrested as soon as found. The whole affair seems to have been an ordinary quarrel between quarrelsome youths whose passions were inflamed with whisky, and has no points of interest other than the lesson of temperance which it so strikingly conveys.—Chicago Inter Ocean.

Another Youthful Train Robber.

It was night.
Night in Arkansas.
It was night in several other States as well, but Arkansas is the one with which we have to deal at this writing. It being our turn to deal.
A lightning express was booming along at the rate of sixty miles an hour. Every car was full, many standing in the aisles with that meekness and patience only seen on an American railroad, to accommodate the fellow who wants four seats all to himself.
The lamps blazed brightly over the passengers' dusters, which seemed to fit fully as well as traveling dusters usually do.
The conductor had passed through (which was more than he would allow any one else to do without the requisite pass), punching people into wakefulness in order that he might punch their tickets.
The train boy had filled the passengers' laps with books, to keep them from bawling in their seats while going over rough places.
The brakeman had put his head in and shouted, "The next stopping place is—" the name of the station being lost in the slamming of the door.
The boy who is always dry has made his fifty-second pilgrimage to the water tank.
And the woman who wants air had just torn off her last remaining finger nail in trying to get her window up.
This was on a railroad in the State of Arkansas.
Suddenly the car doors opened.
A youthful figure appears, holding something in his hand upon which the light glitters. He presents it in a significant manner and cries:
"Now gentlemen, your money—"
Fifty men turn pale and cry, "Don't shoot!"
Twenty females scream with one voice, and some faint.

There is a hasty thrusting of watches and pocketbooks beneath cushions and into boots.
Strong men fight for a place under the seats where they can secrete themselves.
"Gentlemen," again cries the boyish voice, ringing high and clear above the screams of women and din of the train (gasps for mercy from some of the men) "let me sell you some of this excellent tropical fruit," and he extends in his dexter hand—a banana.
It was the train boy, pursuing his useful and harmless vocation.—Cincinnati Saturday Night.
